East of Africa, is the smallest of the African nations in area (11,300 square miles) and population (316,000). It is completely surrounded by the Gambia River, which is approximately a ten mile strip of land on either side of the river, and extends to the river's mouth in the Atlantic. Its capital is Bathurst on the west bank.

The Gambia River was discovered in the 15th century by Portuguese explorers. The country gained control of it in early 16th century. In 1821 the country was placed under jurisdiction of Sierra Leone, and in 1888 was made a British colony. Gambia attained internal self-government in 1961 and full independence in February, 1965.

The principal products are agricultural with ground nuts and palm kernels in the lead. Fishing and livestock production are also large economic factors.
